PAINTING A PATH TO ACCEPTANCE

Relic spurs reunion

Antique wallet. Store owner: 'It's really a feel-good story about family and connection and the power of the Internet'

This blood-donor card was among the items recently found hidden in a wallet that had been locked inside an antique cabinet since 1949. CONTRIBUTED/LORNA VAN STRAATEN

The discovery of a 63-year-old wallet in Whistler has bridged generations, connected families and has given store-owner Lorna Van Straaten one amazing story to tell.

The owner of Whistler's Re-Build-It Centre found the wallet, belonging to a Donald Milford Townsend of Burbank, Calif., in a sealed compartment of a fetching black antique cabinet she had just sold.

The contents — including a driver's licence, union card, family photos and a silver coin — astounded her and sent her on a memorable quest to find the man's family.

"All of this has been sealed away since 1949. No one has touched it. It's really a snapshot of what life was like then," Van Straaten told Metro. "Some of the things we find (in her two antique shops) are beyond description. We get lots of really cool items, but in terms of family sentimental value this tops them all."

The store owner posted the contents of the wallet and her story on her blog, reuseitwhistler.blogspot.com, in an attempt to track down Townsend's family. Within a day, Van Straaten was able to connect with Townsend's cousin, grandson and great nephew.

Townsend himself had died in 2005.

Aside from being an astounding find, the wallet turned out to reunite the relatives.

"They had been out of touch for a while and they told me this has reunited them on a level," said Van Straaten.

The wallet, its contents and the cabinet are now being returned to the family.

Driving laws

B.C. introduces changes to roadside tests

The B.C. government has introduced new driving laws that it says will enhance fairness for drivers accused of being impaired and increase public confidence.

The changes come after a B.C. Supreme Court judge struck down the law that allowed police to issue an immediate roadside suspension to those who blew over .08.

The changes expand the grounds for appeal and make it mandatory for police to tell drivers they can challenge the first roadside test, that the lowest of two tests will prevail and that police must submit documents about the calibration of the roadside breathalyzer.

At least 15,000 people were fined and penalized for blowing over .08 while the law was in place, paying about $4,500 each in fines and fees. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Oppal dismisses criticism of foray into film acting

Missing-women inquiry commissioner Wally Oppal brushed aside criticism Thursday that his brief foray into film has interfered with the inquiry.

Last week, Oppal played the role of a stockbroker killed by a vengeful investor during the filming of Uwe Boll's The Bailout in Vancouver.

"The B.C. Civil Liberties Association made the comment that I should have been working on the inquiry," he said. "I do work on weekends, but I thought I might be entitled to a Sunday off to do this."

First Nations. Musqueam chief says development should be stopped because it's a sacred burial ground for his people

phylicia.torrevillas@metronews.ca

Members of the Musqueam First Nation vow to stop a condo development from "desecrating" an ancient village and burial ground.

The band and their supporters marched down Granville Street in pouring rain to the site, holding signs that read "Protect our Ancestors."

Work is underway for residential and commercial development, which sits on top of the Marpole Midden, a traditional Musqueam village site on South Marine Drive by the Arthur Laing Bridge.

The Musqueam band does not officially own the land at 1338 Southwest Marine Dr., but Musqueam Chief Ernest Campbell said it's an ancient burial ground and has been recognized as a Canadian heritage site.

Musqueam band member Cecilia Point said urgent action is needed because human remains have already been unearthed.

"This last week, they unearthed two infants," she said. "That's just deplorable. We're taking this action in the hopes that the province will hear us."

In January, intact human remains were discovered during an archeological dig by the developer, who agreed to a three-week cooling period following a picket and protest by band members in March.

Work resumed in April after failed negotiations between the developer, the band and government officials.

"We're going to occupy this place 24 hours a day if necessary," Campbell said.

Campbell said the band has offered a land swap in exchange for protection of the site, but everyone except the province has bought in on the suggested solution.

Band members have set up a small gathering area under the bridge near the condo site.

BRUSHING AWAY MISCONCEPTIONS

Mouth and foot painters take part in cross-country art project

CODY TRESIERRA

MATT KIELTYKA
matt.kieltyka@metronews.ca

Cody Tresierra used to get puzzled glances whenever he'd pull into a local painting class.

After all, it's not everyday you see a quadriplegic put a paintbrush in his mouth and get to work.

But the Cloverdale resident said these days it's harder to find people that are dumbfounded by his vivid landscapes and portraits.

"Now it's pretty accepted," Tresierra said of his classmates. "They're still a little bit surprised that I'm there, but once I get started I can pretty much keep up."

It's a bit of an understatement from an artist fluent in the ways of a paintbrush.

Since being hurt in a car accident, Tresierra has gone on to be a successful professional artist and is actively involved in the Mouth and Foot Painting Artists association (MFPA).

He recently finished painting the first part of a cross-country MFPA project called Canvassing the Country: A Moving, Canadian Art Story.

Seven talented disabled painters across Canada are asked to paint something in their region that inspires them and pass it on to the next artist, like an art torch relay.

Personal

"I would paint every day even if no one saw my paintings and they ended up in the garage."
Cody Tresierra

Tresierra chose the totem poles at Stanley Park as his subject.

His top-right-corner spot on the canvass, three by four feet, proved to be a challenge for someone in a wheelchair.

But he managed to expertly pull the landscape off by turning the canvass sideways and upside down.

"I'm really satisfied with it," he said.

The finished piece will be unveiled in September for Self-Help Awareness Week.

"It just shows what people can be capable of — anyone," he said. "The campaign is for Self-Help Awareness Week, that's kind of what the MFPA is about. It's about doing something for yourself and not staying home and feeling sorry for yourself. If you have an interest, pursue it."

Able-bodied people will surely be impressed, but Tresierra hopes that disabled people really take the campaign to heart.

He initially struggled to paint using just his mouth, but with patience and perseverance, the payoff was worth it.

"When you're starting out you're shaking, your strokes are pretty rough and crude," he said.

"A lot of it is for myself. But once you have people appreciate what you've done and respond to your work, there's a lot of self-gratification. It kind of pumps you up inside and makes you feel good."

Other Canvassing the Country artists

Averill Barkhouse of Rawdon, N.S.

Barkhouse joined the MFPA in 1991 after a collision with a truck injured his spine and left him a quadriplegic.

After becoming hooked on art, Barkhouse went on to become an award-winning painter, specializing in portraits and wildlife.

His favourite subject is rural landscape near his home in Nova Scotia.

Michel Guillemette of Quebec City

Guillemette was paralyzed from the neck down after diving into the St. Lawrence River at low tide in 1966. He has been painting since 1977.

"My first landscape was not bad at all, so I decided to continue painting," Guillemette said.

He's been a full member of the MFPA since 2004 and prefers painting landscapes in oils.

Daniel Laflamme of Quebec City

Born without the use of his upper limbs, Laflamme became inspired watching a telecast showing a young girl performing tasks with her feet.

At the age of 24, he learned how to paint with his feet and had his first work reproduced as a greeting card in 1985.

The Quebec countryside gives him constant material for paintings.

Susie Matthias of London, Ont.

Matthias excelled at art from an early age, despite being born without arms or legs.

In 2000, one of her paintings won a national competition and was featured on a special Christmas stamp issued by Canada Post. A member of MFPA since 2009, Matthias also enjoys swimming and electric-wheelchair floor hockey.

Penny Oman of Edmonton

Paralyzed from the neck down after an accident when she was 14, Oman started mouth painting after attending a lecture tour by late MFPA artist Myron Angus.

Determined to try his painting technique, Oman began submitting work to the MFPA in 1978 and has since had her work featured in calendars and on cards.

She also exhibits and sells landscape paintings on her own.

Amanda Orichefsky of Toronto

Orichefsky, 22, was diagnosed with Arthrogrypopis at birth and needed surgery as a baby to lower her legs and feet to a normal level.

She took art courses in college to improve her technique and currently has a scholarship from the MFPA to further her talents.

Orichefsky even got to paint with Wayne Gretzky during a campaign for Ronald McDonald House.

A great blue heron sits atop a tree as the moon rises in the eastern sky over Daytona Beach, Fla., during the last supermoon on March 18, 2011. NIGEL COOK /DAYTONA BEACH NEWS-JOURNAL/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's a bird, it's a plane ... it's a supermoon!

Look up. The moon will be 13 per cent bigger and brighter than usual on Saturday — and there's more to spot in the night sky

KATE WEBB
kate.webb@metronews.ca

If it's clear Saturday night — and that's a big if — make sure to look to the east to catch the rising supermoon: The coincidence of the moon's closest approach to Earth in its elliptical orbit and a full moon.

UBC astronomer Peter Newbury said even though the last one was more than a year ago, it's not a big deal, scientifically speaking. The moon Saturday night will be 13 per cent bigger and brighter than usual, which is hardly noticeable unless you compare it to how it looks when it's at the furthest point in its orbit.

Still, he said it's worth catching on the way up at 8:38 p.m., when Earth's atmosphere gives it an amber glow.

"That's when it looks most spectacular, because it always looks bigger when it's close to the horizon, because you see the moon next to these buildings and trees, and you see how large it seems," he said. "Six hours later, when the moon is overhead or high in the sky, it's this circle that's sitting there; you don't have any reference."

He noted that the lunar event — known in science-speak as perigee–syzygy, meaning close and full — isn't the only thing worth looking at Saturday in the night sky.

"If people are standing outside looking toward the east where the moon is rising, then they should turn around and look toward the west, because Venus is the really, really bright object in the western sky."

At the same time, due south, about halfway between the horizon and directly overhead, you'll see a brighter, reddish dot: That's Mars in the constellation Leo. Historically, the prominent appearance of Leo in the evening sky marks the appearance of spring.

The forecast isn't calling for clear skies until Sunday, but just in case an astronomer will be on hand in the observatory at the H.R. MacMillan Space Centre from 8 to 12 p.m. Saturday, ready to answer questions. Admission is free.

Documentary film festival. DOXA Review: Italy: Love It, or Leave It

Partners in filmmaking and life Luca Ragazzi and Gustav Hofer star in Italy: Love It, or Leave It. CONTRIBUTED/DOXA

One gets the sense when watching DOXA's nearly sold-out Saturday offering, Italy: Love It, or Leave It, that the filmmakers are not entirely serious in asking the question.

After all, what's not to love? Italy is one of Europe's crown jewels, with enough food, wine, art and architecture to warrant a 10-pound volume of Frommer's.

But the once-glorious empire has also become riddled with corruption, greed, sexism, discrimination and unmanaged waste. That, and persistent Silvio Berlusconi supporters. For those living in the economically collapsing country these days — particularly the young — it's no prosciutto picnic.

So native Luca Ragazzi sets out to take his foreign-educated partner, Gustav Hofer, on an insider's tour of the boot-shaped bel paese in their vintage Fiat 500, to ask Italians whether and why they have any optimism left, and to convince Hofer not to split for Berlin.

This film has moments that will shock you into laughter and silence you in disgust, but it also stands as a reminder of Italy's timeless beauty and the tremendous perseverance of its people.

Online tickets are sold out but advance and rush tickets may still be available. It plays at 4 p.m. on Saturday at Pacific Cinémathèque.

RATING (OUT OF 5):

Spree of violence. Another area man shot to death

An unidentified man has been found shot to death in a Surrey home — the week's third gun-related fatality of a Vancouver-area resident.

The violence comes just as Vancouver police have identified the victim of Wednesday's drive-by shooting as 44-year-old gangster Ranjit Cheema.

The well-known gangster was gunned down as he entered his vehicle on a residential street in east Vancouver.

Const. Jana McGuinness says people living in the neighbourhood have been shaken by the brazen hit, and that an innocent person could have been hurt.

Police are asking anyone who may have seen a vehicle idling in the area over the last couple of weeks to contact them.

Last Friday's shooting death of Fraser Valley gangster Thomas Gisby at a Starbucks in Mexico has had the RCMP warning of possible retaliation. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Making dream vacations a reality

Reality TV show. Write a 250-word letter nominating someone you feel deserves a vacation

KATE WEBB
kate.webb@metronews.ca

Everybody "needs" a vacation, but a new travel series about to be shot in Vancouver is scouting for 15 truly deserving people whose friends and family want to whisk them away by complete surprise to their dream destination.

Operation: Vacation is the brainchild of director and series producer Nicky Forsman, who was inspired to send special people on spectacular trips by the lack of stamps in her own mother's passport.

The show's only requirements are that nominees be adult Canadian citizens — and completely in the dark when camera crews show up at their front door.

"We have no idea what kind of people we're going to get, so we're willing to look at anything as an option, and for me that person's story is more important than where they want to end up," explained Forsman, who is producing the series mainly in Vancouver and possibly Toronto for Convergent Entertainment.

"I'm hoping to find some genuinely good human beings that are very selfless and put everybody before them, or just based on their circumstances don't have a chance to do this type of thing for themselves very often."

Each episode will start with two travel experts meeting the nominee's friends and family. Together they'll make a list of the unsuspecting person's ultimate travel fantasies, and sort out all the logistics.

After the big moment of surprise, the lucky recipient will embark immediately on the adventure of their lifetime.

Operation: Vacation starts shooting in July, and the first episodes are expected to air in early 2013 on U.S. and Canadian cable networks.

Applicants should send a 250-word letter introducing themselves, the nominee, and the nominee's dream destinations to contestants@convergententertainment.tv.

Secure network

New broadband for EMS workers

The federal government is following through on its commitment to keep the public safe through a new dedicated broadband network for emergency responders, Public Safety Minister Vic Toews announced Thursday in Vancouver.

Toews said police officers, firefighters and paramedics across the country will soon be able to communicate with each other in a more secure and less congested network as 10 MHz of the 700 MHz existing broadband spectrum will be set aside for public-safety use.

Vancouver police Chief Jim Chu said the network will be up and running in the next few years.

Toronto mayor blacklists reporter he accuses of spying

A different scrum. Police were called over an incident involving a Toronto Star reporter snooping around the mayor's property

Toronto Mayor Rob Ford answers questions from the media following the announcement of a pedestrian tunnel to be constructed to Billy Bishop Airport in Toronto on March 9. PAWEL DWULIT/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Mayor Rob Ford says he won't talk to any media in the presence of a reporter he accuses of spying on his home.

Ford told radio station AM640 this morning he wants Toronto Star reporter Daniel Dale removed from covering city hall in light of last night's confrontation.

Police were called to the mayor's west Toronto home after a neighbour saw someone who appeared to be in the mayor's backyard with a recording device. The Star says Dale was on public property next to Ford's home and was there to research a story about a piece of land Ford wants to buy. The paper says Dale was not there to harass Ford.

A visibly angry Ford held a press conference outside his home on Wednesday night and said it's unbelievable what the reporter did, adding when he confronted Dale, the journalist dropped his phone and recorder before running away.

Dale's version of events, posted on the Star's website, says Ford yelled and charged at him with one fist up even though the reporter pleaded for him to stop.

Ford said this morning he "never laid a hand on" Dale but stressed he doesn't want to see the reporter in any media scrums.

"I will not be talking to any reporters if he is part of that scrum," he told AM640.

This isn't the first time Ford has been involved in a dust-up with a member of the media.

In October, Ford called 911 after Mary Walsh of the CBC's comedy series 22 Minutes confronted him in his driveway dressed as her Marg Delahunty, Princess Warrior character. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Student suspended for Jesus T-shirt

A Grade 12 student in Nova Scotia has been suspended for wearing a T-shirt publicizing his religious beliefs.

The South Shore Regional School Board suspended William Swinimer from Forest Heights Community School in Chester Basin for five days for wearing a shirt emblazoned with the words, "Life is wasted without Jesus."

School board Supt. Nancy Pynch-Worthylake said the wording on the shirt is problematic because it is directed at the beliefs of others.

"If I have an expression that says, 'My life is enhanced with Jesus,' then there's no issue with that," she said.

Prosecution reveals evidence in Clemens' trial

Exhibit 52C was the semi-crushed Miller Lite beer can. Exhibit 52D was the FedEx box that once contained the beer can. Then came exhibits of gauze, tissues, syringes, cotton balls and needles, some of which were once inside the beer can.

Budget cuts resources for soldiers

Public-service union officials say the Defence Department is cutting resources for mental health, even as suicide rates among soldiers are climbing.

They say federal budget cuts are shutting down part of department's program to monitor mental health and work on suicide prevention.

The Professional Institute of the Public Service says experts who focus on post-traumatic stress disorder and brain injuries among soldiers are among those losing their jobs.

Campaign. Woman banking on Facebook

Cristina Di Corte found out she had mitochondrial neurogastrointestinal encephalopathy on the same day she learned that a bone-marrow transplant could save her life.

It was also the beginning of an ambitious coast-to-coast social-media campaign to find a donor match.

Also known as MNGIE, the genetic condition has only ever been diagnosed in 70 people worldwide.

Di Corte, a 22-year-old Mississauga, Ont., native first started noticing symptoms when she was 17, but it would be four years before she was accurately diagnosed. The condition affects the muscles that move material through the digestive system.

"I was nauseous, throwing up, and had horrible stomach pains," says Di Corte, whose weight dropped to as low as 68 pounds. A series of doctors and specialists misdiagnosed her with irritable bowel syndrome, tested her for celiac disease and colon cancer, and even sent her to a clinic for people with eating disorders.

She now needs a bone-marrow transplant.

"I basically need it as soon as possible," says Di Corte, who now receives nutrients through a central catheter line. Di Corte is registered with Onematch.ca, a stem-cell and marrow donor network, but they warned her that the list is long.

That's when her older brother had an idea. "He was like, why don't we put this on Facebook?" says Di Corte, who agreed.

A Facebook event asked friends and family to tweet #hopeforcristina on Twitter every Wednesday at 6 p.m. She also has her own website, helpingcristina.org, and it wasn't long before Di Corte was telling her story on Citytv.

STERLING LOCATION

BUYERS FLOCK TO STUNNING SILVER HIGHRISE IN BURNABY

To say the grand opening weekend of Intracorp's new project Silver was an amazing success would be a massive understatement. The stunning Burnaby highrise sold more than 200 units in just two days.

Don Forsgren, president of Intracorp, says buyers couldn't wait to get their hands on a home in Silver for a variety of reasons.

"Buyers saw Silver as a sterling opportunity to invest in a neighbourhood that will see real growth as it transforms into one of the most desirable urban centres in Metro Vancouver," says Forsgren.

"Homebuyers are motivated by Silver's proximity to SkyTrain, the vision for Beresford Street's revitalization as a pedestrian-focused great street, and Intracorp's reputation as a quality developer."

Silver's location and amenities make it perfect for young families and first-time buyers, and so far the majority of those buyers have been local. In fact, 97.6 per cent came from the Lower Mainland, with most coming from Vancouver (39 per cent), Burnaby (33 per cent), and Richmond (nine per cent).

When asked what it was about Silver that interested them, most of the young and first-time purchasers once again were enamoured by the building's excellent location.

"Younger buyers cited the proximity to SkyTrain, Metrotown and all the future amenities of the Beresford Street area, including a revitalized transit station and new Burnaby Public Library as key attractions for them," says Susan Rutledge, Intracorp's vice-president of sales.

"The vision of the lively new neighbourhood, complete with extra-wide tree-lined sidewalks, outdoor seating, street-front cafés and retail shops had a huge appeal to this group of homebuyers."

The transformation of Beresford Street is underway thanks to Intracorp's 40-storey tower, MetroPlace, which is now under construction.

Stage 2 of the transformation revolves around Silver — a sleek, 38-storey residential tower that will be LEED Silver equivalent, featuring expansive patios and balconies, as well as the Control4 smart home system that controls virtually any device in the home.

Silver's design team includes architect Richard Henry, from award-winning NSDA Architects, and BBA Design Consultants, who have together created a clean and contemporary design. Buyers can look forward to laminated hardwood flooring, composite stone kitchen countertops and gorgeous views.

Despite its successful grand opening, there are still units available. Silver's 284 new concrete homes include one-bedroom, two-bedroom, two-bedroom-plus-den, and townhomes.

The sales office is located at 6039 McKay St., Burnaby.

Anders Behring Breivik. Norway mass killer, in black suit and grey tie, shows no emotion as ferry captain gives testimony on 11th day of trial

Mental state

- Breivik has said that being declared insane would be the worst thing that could happen to him because it would "delegitimize" his views.

Witnesses recounted Thursday how mass murderer Anders Behring Breivik — armed and in police uniform — managed to trick his way onto a ferry to Utoya island, where he massacred 69 people in a shooting spree just hours after killing eight people in a bomb attack.

Jon Olson, captain of the MS Thorbjoern ferry, told the Oslo District Court about his "angst and full panic" as he frantically tried to contact police about the attack after his ferry had docked at Utoya.

Breivik has admitted to the bombing in Oslo's government district and the shootings at a Labor Party youth camp on Utoya. He claims the July 22 attacks were "necessary" and that the 77 victims had betrayed Norway by embracing immigration.

Olson, who lost his partner, Monica Boesei, the second person to die in the shootings, said neither he nor his crew suspected Breivik. Witnesses described Breivik as composed and behaving normally as he arrived from the car-bomb attack in central Oslo.

RIM shares plunge to 2003 level

Market. BlackBerry maker's shares plunge to below $12 in the three days following initial preview of new operating system

A BlackBerry testing device. RESEARCH IN MOTION HANDOUT

The Canadian company that revolutionized the mobile phone industry spent a very expensive week trying to sell the idea that the BlackBerry isn't a dying technology, only to see its share price close Thursday at its lowest level in nearly a decade.

Research In Motion stock fell 72 cents, or 5.7 per cent, to close at $11.91 on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

It hasn't been below $12 since 2003.

Thursday's plunge marked three days of declines that began after the Waterloo, Ont., tech giant gave a first glimpse of its much-anticipated new operating software at its annual developer conference in Orlando, Fla.

The BlackBerry 10 OS prototype was handed to developers in the hope of getting them onside and writing applications for the system, but it won't hit the market for several months.

RIM's shares have fallen some 15 per cent since Tuesday's reveal of the operating system. At its height the stock was trading at more than $144 in 2008, when RIM was briefly the most valuable company on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

During the conference, RIM chief executive Thorsten Heins was forced to confront rumours that the new BlackBerry would feature only a touchscreen keyboard and not a physical keypad.

The confusion arose after Heins unveiled the new operating system and focused on some flashy features available to touchscreen users, but didn't address any future plans for keypad devices. Some reports suggested the company would completely ditch the physical keys that helped build its name and are favoured by many of its users.

"We won't lose the focus on physical keypads. It would be wrong, just plain wrong to do this," Heins said.

At this point, it's hard to tell whether the event either helped or hurt the company in the long run, but judging by RIM's volatile stock, investors aren't impressed yet.

BlackBerry 10 is seen as an important part of RIM's attempt to compete against the likes of the iPhone and devices using Google's Android operating system. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pipeline. Keystone XL future still uncertain

TransCanada won't confirm a report in the Washington Post that it will reapply for its controversial Keystone XL pipeline as soon as Friday.

A person familiar with TransCanada's plans spoke to the Post on the condition of anonymity because a formal announcement has not yet been made, the newspaper said Thursday.

CEO Russ Girling told reporters following TransCanada's annual general meeting last Friday that the new application is "imminent." Company spokesman Terry Cunha said Thursday that Girling's comment still stands, with no specific date being provided.

The Obama administration rejected the $7.6-billion US project earlier this year, though it left the door open for TransCanada to take another crack at it.

The White House says the decision had less to do with the Alberta-to-Texas pipeline's merits than moves by Republicans in Congress to speed up the process.

Google goes up against authors in court case

Google has urged a judge to toss The Authors Guild out of litigation over the future of the world's largest digital library.

A Google lawyer told a judge Thursday that authors cannot be represented as a group because their interests are too varied.

The Author's Guild lawyer said it would be too expensive to force authors to fight Google individually.

The Manhattan judge earlier tossed out a settlement in the case, suggesting Google might want to allow book owners to opt into the library rather than be required to quit it.

The lawsuit was filed by the authors six years ago.

IT'S SNOOKI CALLING THE POT BLACK

THE LIST
Mike Benhaim
Metro

1 Same old story: You know the one — lady's philandering husband spends all her money, then leaves for a hotter, richer woman. Spurned lady spends a year feeling dirty and used, and just when she's begun to move on, he returns with flowers and playful charms. Still vulnerable, she crumbles, and her friends throw up their arms saying, "He's not even that good looking." In other news, Conrad Black returns to Canada.

2 Let it be written: As an example of necessity being the "mother of invention," researchers at Arizona State University have released a list of "commandments" for Facebook. Issues covered by the rules: acknowledging postings to your page by clicking "Like," inappropriate "poking" (never wise), and posting pictures of friends from a debauched weekend in Vegas. My favourite edict, not limited to FB, is "Thou shalt use common sense," which, ironically, supersedes a need for the list to begin with.

3 Carrot caution: A study released Wednesday out of Ohio University has found that consuming excessive amounts of beta carotene might not be good for you. Contrary to what we've been told for centuries, it can block some effects of vitamin A critical to vision, skin health, metabolism and immune function. Vision? It goes to show you just can't trust your mom anymore.

4 Playing hardball: Two years after Victoria's Secret combined two of men's favorite things by releasing their line of baseball-themed lingerie, they introduce the Blue Jays collection. With two types of sexy briefs (one leopard print), and two skimpy tees, they've given new meaning to the phrase "Sliding into home."

5 United we stand: Canadian awards shows the Genies and the Geminis, are joining forces to create just one all-encompassing program. This is great news for apathetic Canadians who now only have to not watch one show.

6 Labour days: Jessica Simpson has given birth to a 22-inch, nine-pound, 13-ounce baby girl. This explains the tremendous baby bump that prompted pregnant Jersey Shore star Nicole "Snooki" Polizzi to say, "I'd die if I ever got that big." Aw, Snooki, we don't want you to die. We just want you to go away. Gone.

7 Hoops! My bad: Some are saying the stress of the condensed NBA season has resulted in a post-season riddled with injuries. None more symbolic than when Knicks' Amare Stoudemire tempered the burning flames of his competitive passion after a brutal loss to Miami by punching a fire extinguisher. Someone might have mentioned requiring the hand to play out the series. Surprisingly, Amare skipped college to go pro.

8 Canadian courtship: Our nation's first TV Bachelor is CFL wide receiver Brad Smith, who can't wait to meet all the wonderful women who will join him in this consummate quest for love. He seeks independent, intelligent women who are "just as confident in a ponytail and sweats as they are all dressed up." And adds that high-maintenance women turn him off. Relax, Brad. Any intelligent woman willing to endure weeks of public judgment, cat fights and drama, all to potentially marry a CFL player, is probably not high-maintenance.

Edvard Munch

Work of art sells for historic price

NEW YORK. Edvard Munch's The Scream made history on Wednesday night when it became the most expensive piece of art ever sold at auction.

After a fierce bidding war at Sotheby's New York, the 1895 pastel went to an anonymous buyer for $119.9 million US. The auction house was thrilled at the "historic" price on a night when sales topped $330 million US.

Simon Shaw, the head of impressionist and modern art for Sotheby's, said the painting was a good deal.

"If ever there was a work of art of true shock and awe, it is Edvard Munch's The Scream, which is not only one of the seminal images from art history, but also one of the visual keys to the modern consciousness."

The work is one of four versions by the Norwegian expressionist artist and was the only one still privately owned.

It is regarded as the most prized of the four as a poem written by the artist is on the frame.

Scream-worthy poetry

"I was walking along the road with two friends. The Sun was setting — The Sky turned a bloody red And I felt a whiff of Melancholy — I stood Still, deathly tired — over the blue-black Fjord and City hung Blood and Tongues of Fire. My Friends walked on — I remained behind — shivering with Anxiety. I felt the great Scream in Nature."

Munch's poem written in blood red paint

By the numbers

What can you buy with $119.9 million US?

- 60,000 classic British telephone boxes
- 20,000 tigers
- 40 Stradivarius violins
- 15 light jets
- Six holidays at the International Space Station
- One Cristiano Ronaldo

60 seconds

Modern art specialist Philip Hook

Why has this work of art been so popular?

It's one of the most important pictures ever in terms of fame and familiarity because it captures the modern man with his angst and alienation. It marked a new phase at the start of the 20th century when artists began portraying their own emotions.

What moral lessons can be found in it?

There is a comment on man's relationship with nature, but also it is based on guilt. When Munch painted this his father had just died and his sister was in a lunatic asylum.

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Putting the 'super' in superhero films

Roundup. Richard Crouse and Mark Breslin dish on their favourite vigilante features

Richard: Mark, even though the ads guaranteed I would believe a man could fly, I'm not sure that my fifteen-year-old self actually thought Christopher Reeve was circling the earth in Superman: The Movie, but I do know I thought it was cool. And still do. I've seen it dozens of times and its blend of humour, action and nostalgia is worth its weight in Kryptonite.

Mark: The first Superman movie was the platinum standard in superhero films: graceful, even poetic. The sequels ruined its goodwill, but the quality of the original cannot be denied. But I think the world can be divided into two kinds of people: Superman people and Batman people, and I, Richard, seem to be a Batman person. Even the weakest in the Batman franchise still enthralls me; if we're talking about Christopher Nolan's The Dark Knight, we may be talking Godfather-level cinema.

RC: Of the big name superheroes we haven't mentioned Spider-Man yet. I liked the first Sam Raimi web slinger movie, complete with Tobey Maguire and the upside down kiss, but even cooler is Darkman. Raimi created the Darkman character out of frustration after failing to get the screen rights to The Shadow and Batman. Liam Neeson plays the swashbuckling hero in this violent and funny movie.

MB: Darkman is a dark horse entry, but yes, it's a good one and Neeson is fantastic in it. Wish I could share your enthusiasm for Spider-Man but I spent the entire movie wishing the dweeb would grow a pair. More like Spider-Boy to me. The series I prefer is the X-Men franchise, which seems to get more sophisticated with each release. And the Wolverine spin-off is a definite fave.

RC: I liked Wolverine's R-rated cameo in X-Men: First Class. Cool, underrated movie and his unfit-for-publication-in-a-family-paper-line is very memorable. Also memorable are a few movies about a lesser tier of superheroes. Everyone knows Batman and Superman, but how about Captain Invisible, the alcoholic hero who comes out of hiding to save America from destruction? Or the strange and funny Orgazmo from the twisted minds of South Park's Matt Stone and Trey Parker?

Synopsis

Lately it seems you couldn't swing Thor's hammer in a theatre without hitting a superhero movie, like this weekend's The Avengers, but movies about caped crusaders and heroes who can leap buildings in a single bound are nothing new. This week the Reel Guys use their superhuman powers to pick the best superhero movies of all time.

MB: And what about the lonely comic book superheroes never immortalized on film? When, oh when, will they make that masterpiece starring The Flash??? The scene where he'd do his taxes in three seconds flat would be worth the price of admission!

D'Angelo sparkles

D'Angelo is making his comeback: the reclusive singer will give his first U.S. performance in 10 years at the 2012 Essence Music Festival. D'Angelo will perform during the festival's opening night. It runs from July 6 to July 8 in New Orleans and also features Trey Songz, Aretha Franklin, Mary J. Blige and many others. The soul singer's latest album is 2000's Voodoo. It went platinum and won two Grammy Awards, including best R&B album. His debut, 1995's Brown Sugar, was also a platinum effort. Since that, D'Angelo has stepped away from the music scene, drawing attention for his run-ins with the law.

Action

The Avengers

Director. Joss Whedon

Stars. Robert Downey Jr., Chris Evans, Scarlett Johansson

Great comic book movies, like great comic books, have to play their heroes and villains straight. The stakes have to be high and in the case of Marvel's The Avengers, the fate of the planet literally hangs in the balance. The humour is innately there (a bunch of costumed superheroes hanging out together is already absurd) but in director Joss Whedon's mammoth budgeted blockbuster, the humour is of the nudging, winking variety, almost as if Whedon is trying to convince the audience that he's smarter than the material. It's an obnoxious trait that bogs down what could have been a perfect mash up.

CHRIS ALEXANDER

Comedy

Darling Companion

Director. Lawrence Kasdan

Stars. Diane Keaton, Kevin Kline, Ayelet Zurer

Beth (Keaton) is devastated when her husband Joseph (Kline) loses her beloved dog. After an unsuccessful initial search, Beth and her search party do what all desperate dog-lovers do: they follow the advice of the gypsy caretaker who has "visions" of the dog's whereabouts. Though it provided a few laughs, the subplot was ultimately unnecessary, considering the film is more about fostering relationships.

REGAN REID

Quoted

"It did actually really scare me to step into this world and I didn't know that I could pull it off. It took some convincing from people like (co-star) Robert (Downey Jr.) and Joss. The thing that I was always worried about was just getting pigeon-holed by a big part like this. But now I'm at a point where I have a big enough body of work where this isn't going to make me or break me, really. It'll help, in a lot of ways."

Mark Ruffalo, talking about stepping into the role of the Hulk in The Avengers.

Legend of a Warrior. Doc breaks down tough guys

Forged in a harsh Hong Kong ghetto, Frank Lee came to Canada in 1960 and worked overnights at the rough and tumble Phoenix Cafe in Edmonton.

He was a waiter/busboy/bouncer and, as miscreants soon found out, a very talented martial artist. When trouble started, he ended it. Tough as nails, the five-foot-seven 155-pounder never lost a fight.

He went on to become a martial arts grandmaster out of the Edmonton gym dubbed Frank's Torture Chamber. And he trained champions half a world away in Thailand and Hong Kong.

Along the way, his family drifted apart.

So son Corey — a filmmaker — set about to reconnect. In 2011, he started training under his father, returning to the martial arts he had abandoned more than two decades before.

"He is my father. But I don't really know the man. I only know the legend," Corey says early on in Legend of a Warrior, which had its world premiere at the Hot Docs festival this week.

Cameras captured their time together over some seven months.

"I was hoping for some level of healing and some level of understanding," Corey, now 42, said in an interview this week.

He got that and more in an emotional journey that is lovingly captured in the 78-minute documentary.

The National Film Board project starts as a guarded father-son reunion in the ring at Frank's gym. But emotional walls are torn down later in the film during a trip to Hong Kong, where Frank first studied martial arts after leaving China with his family at the age of nine.

Tears flow as Frank rereads a letter he sent Corey from Hong Kong in February 1983 on yet another training mission that had taken him from his family. The man who can bend rebar with his neck or break cinder blocks with his hands cries as he laments the breakup of his family — or "crystal ball" as he calls it.

It is heart-rending stuff and it's a safe bet that many more tears will be shed by those watching it.

Art is like life in tale of two robbers

Edwin Boyd: Citizen Gangster. Kevin Durand talks about the distant relationship with his co-star and fictional partner in crime

scene@metronews.ca

Kevin Durand left, says that he and co-star Scott Speedman had a relationship similar to their characters. HANDOUT

On the set of Edwin Boyd: Citizen Gangster art imitated life.

The story of legendary Canadian bank robbers Edwin Boyd and Lenny Jackson is ripe with daring stick-ups, jailbreaks and gunfights, but despite a criminal partnership that made both men household names they weren't close.

"On a personal level I don't think there was a whole lot of love there," says Kevin Durand, who plays Jackson in the film.

"They dealt with things in a different way. Lenny and Edwin had very different ways of approaching their job."

Durand and co-star Scott Speedman, who plays Boyd, manifested that aloofness to create their characters on the Sault Ste. Marie set.

"We definitely had respect for one another and we liked each other but we didn't go out of our way to hang out together," Durand says.

"It was interesting in the way it panned out because I ended up spending a lot of time with Val and Wille, (Joseph Cross and Brendan Fletcher).

"Those were my guys and we literally became the gang. It was incredible because we were holed up in the north, in the cold, in our little hotel rooms and we became this little tribe of ... I want to say thieves but we didn't go thieving, but it felt very real."

The story may have come to life for Durand on set, but he was unaware of the Boyd Gang's exploits before he read the script.

"I was really taken aback at how famous they were to another generation," he says.

"My Uncle Tom filled me in at a discussion at a family dinner.

"He knew all about it and was really excited about me playing Lenny."

His uncle vividly remembered the gang's early fifties heyday.

"My uncle said, 'My God, we were so terrified. I remember hiding in my bedroom hoping that the Boyd Gang wasn't going to come in my window and rob me and kill me.'"

Lenny and Edwin may have been bad guys, but that's not exactly how Durand sees them.

"The thing about these guys, like most bad guys, is that they are human and they are a product of their environment and their time," he says.

"You see them in the movie with their loved ones and you see the poetry of their lives.

"The script really sucked me into that world."

Bird breaks through with Break It Yourself

New music. Latest songs plot songwriter's trajectory from a breakup in Chicago to a new life in New York

LINDA LABAN
Metro World News

One week after Andrew Bird filmed an appearance on Jimmy Kimmel Live! in Los Angeles, the singer-songwriter and violinist is back home in New York with his segment due to air that night.

Apart from Saturday Night Live, Bird has done just about all the late night TV shows. "Colbert was a high point," he says, admitting he's a big Stephen Colbert fan. He's confident that SNL will happen "in due time."

And Bird is due. Break It Yourself has just been released.

"I call it my ninth album," Bird says. "It's the ninth album that's had a cycle to it. There's been a live record and soundtracks. If you count them all up, there's probably 15 or 16."

That includes his pre-solo outfit Andrew Bird's Bowl of Fire, which highlighted the 38-year-old's love of pre-war jazz before his singer-songwriter turn. Bird's future work, however, might take yet another musical twist.

"I continue to write songs that make sense as an Andrew Bird record, but I hear things that I don't know how to pull off yet. All I can say is what I am hearing is less pop-oriented and more devotional or religious. Not religious in the sense of 'Jesus I love you,'" he emphasizes.

"It seems like it might be time to do something a little different."

The antisocial network

Andrew Bird is a Chicago native, but has called New York City home for almost two years. Break It Yourself plots his trajectory from a breakup to a new life there.

"I don't tend to write songs where there's any mention of breaking any hearts. There's a theme on the record of being self-contained, self-satisfied, I suppose.

"A lot of New Yorkers are experts at that. I'm puzzling through whether that's a virtue, not needing anyone else. I've got my own solitary, antisocial leanings. I'm kind of questioning those on the record."

Tupac-style holograms: It was inevitable

SOUND CHECK
Alan Cross
scene@metronews.ca

Ever since Tupac's hologram resurrection at Coachella last month, people have been talking about the potential for this technology.

"Bring Michael Jackson back and the Jacksons can restage the Victory Tour of 1984!" they say.

The original line-up of The Who could do another farewell tour.

What would it be like to have Kurt Cobain and Jimi Hendrix in the same band at a show?

Reuters recently asked 1,100 people whom they would most like to see return from the dead.

The answer was Ray Charles.

Some critics find this most distressing and I understand that.

But we've been moving down this road towards virtual performers for decades.

Today, fans expect pitch-perfect note-for-note renditions of their favourite songs in concert and (where applicable) all kinds of dancing, special effects and costume changes.

The only way to do that is with Auto-Tune and backing tracks.

We live in a computer generated imagery world where technology blurs reality on TV screens, in theatres, in amusement parks and on computers.

Why wouldn't this be extended to the realm of live concerts?

Besides, don't we believe that all celebrities are fake, anyway?

From Jessie's Girl to Hot Docs — Rick keeps rockin'

Rick Springfield. At 61, the '80s star won't do reality TV, but he is writing a series that he hopes to play the lead in Rocker and former soap heartthrob Rick Springfield says he's angling to return to the small screen and is writing an edgy dramatic series in which he hopes to star.

The Australian-born '80s singer says he's been working on several TV scripts ever since he wrote a tell-all book that was released in 2010.

Springfield says he'd like to do a lot more acting after recent cameos that included the raunchy specialty series Californication, the geriatric sitcom Hot in Cleveland and a brief return to General Hospital where he reprised his role as the hunky Dr. Noah Drake.

So far, Springfield says most of his offers come from reality television but he's sworn off the genre.

"I've been offered those so many friggin' times," Springfield said during a recent stop in Toronto for the Canadian International Documentary Festival. "And (I'll) never (do) Dancing With the Stars. My wife said she'd divorce me if I ever did that. They ask me every year."

The 61-year-old still performs between 70 and 100 concerts a year and is gearing up to release a new album in the fall.

At the core of his fanbase is a group of ardent followers who trace their devotion to the early '80s, when Springfield broke onto the charts with his infectious smash Jessie's Girl.

Their unwavering loyalty — and sometimes-disturbing devotion — is the focus of the documentary An Affair of the Heart, which had its Canadian premiere at the Hot Docs festival earlier this week. Another screening is set for Thursday.

Amid plenty of concert footage, interviews and nostalgic looks back at Springfield's heydays, director Sylvia Caminer tracks down several "Rick-a-holics" and traces the myriad ways in which they connect with his music and have even managed to bond with the star himself.

"Some people have an addiction to cocaine, people like me have an addiction to Rick Springfield," one fan declares in a voiceover.

It's soon clear she's not alone. Stay-at-home moms Sue and Joanne make a point of catching a Springfield-related event as often as every month, with one husband bemoaning: "She wakes up and it's Rick, Rick, Rick until she goes to bed."

Meanwhile, an interfaith minister credits one of Springfield's harder-rocking albums with helping her cope with the suppressed anger she felt after a brutal sex assault.

Throughout, Springfield makes a point of showing supporters he doesn't take their loyalty for granted. He hosts an annual music cruise, invites fans to pre-concert soundchecks and, in the case of one longtime admirer, even emailed to offer condolences when he heard her husband had died.

Springfield says he owes his career to loyal fans who stuck with him through the decades, even after he withdrew from the spotlight in a deep depression that followed his meteoric rise.

Back when he started out, Springfield says he was more focused on himself than anything else but he's since learned to appreciate the audience that has buoyed a rebirth in his career.

Amber Riley strikes back

Let's hear it for Glee star Amber Riley. After a red carpet fainting spell earlier in the week, she's on the (hilarious) defensive about her personal life — including whether or not she's expecting.

"Let me stop the rumour mill right now. I'm not pregnant. Yes, I'm black but I don't have diabetes, I don't starve myself to fit clothes; I buy clothes to fit me not vice versa," Riley posted to Twitter in response to the rumours that sprouted up overnight after her episode.

"I did get a great laugh this morning reading all the BS, though."

Cut it out Cameron, it's just some hair

A recent rushed visit to a hairdresser friend left Cameron Diaz with much shorter locks than expected — and tears in her eyes.

"I started crying. I felt so vulnerable. For a woman to all of a sudden have no hair — oh my God," she tells Jay Leno during an interview. "There was a little misunderstanding. I said I just want a little bit cut off."

But a bit quickly turned into a bob, which turned traumatic for all involved.

"She started crying. I started crying. A couple other people started crying. I ended up writing her a few emails over the next few days assuring her I was OK," Diaz says.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

Seriously Ashton, that's just plain racist

THE WORD

Poor Popchips. They just wanted to get people to eat their unique snack food (a.k.a. communion wafers with salt) but their recent online ad campaign is backfiring spectacularly.

The face of the campaign, Ashton Kutcher, is currently facing criticism for his roles in the commercials that many feel are racist, according to E! News. In the online video, Kutcher appears as numerous ridiculous characters, including Raj, a brown-faced Bollywood producer with a thick Indian accent. (Kutcher also appears as a character sending up Karl Lagerfeld that could be construed as homophobic.)

Overwhelmingly negative responses to the advertisement prompted Popchips to remove it from YouTube and Facebook a day after it was released.

"The new Popchips worldwide dating video and ad campaign featuring four characters was created to provoke a few laughs and was never intended to stereotype or offend anyone," a company rep said in a statement to the Hollywood Reporter.

Here's the thing someone should have told Popchips: Kutcher can't act. At all. His version of "acting" is basically over the top parody — all the time. So when he gets tapped to portray someone of a different race, even in a comedic role, of course it will be seen as mockery/racism. The only actor who could tackle this without getting in trouble? Sir Ben Kingsley. Popchips, get that guy on the phone ASAP.

Lady Gaga single again

Lady Gaga and boyfriend Taylor Kinney have reportedly called it quits, with the culprit being the singer's hectic schedule, according to Us Weekly.

"She will be touring nonstop until next year and has found she can't have a relationship at the same time," a source says of Gaga, who is about to embark on a 110-stop tour.

"There's just no room for anything else. Her work is all-consuming." Of course, to hear the source tell it, the relationship might not have lasted much longer on its own, anyway. "Taylor was all about himself, a typical actor, and didn't completely get Gaga," the source says.

Miley makes a dog Happy

Miley Cyrus added a fourth dog to her pet roster after finding a Rottweiler-Beagle mix abandoned outside a shopping centre, she revealed on Twitter.

"He was left in a box in front of Walmart," Cyrus posted. "I don't understand how people can be so cruel. That's why we named him Happy."

Cyrus spent the rest of the day posting photos of Happy enjoying his new environment.

I've had a long standing respect for tequila, but the distilled output of agave plants is by no means the only booze stamped "Made in Mexico".

With Cinco de Mayo celebrations a day away and Salma Hayek shilling for Burger King, south of the border (the American one at least) things are heating up.

Sadly, the country's superstar brand — Corona Extra (6x330 ml, $12.95 - $14.09) — gets a bum rap from beer aficionados thanks to its lean-bodied flavour and clear glass bottle (which fanatics swear allows natural light to affect its flavour).

Whatever you believe, Corona is a great beer to have with any food that's eclectic — especially if it's spicy.

Of course, the last thing I would do is allow a bartender to jam a wedge of lime into any Corona bottle I've ordered. They may seem to go together like Brad and Angelina but the union of lime and liquid really began as a way to keep flies out of an opened bottle. It turns out that the acidity in the citrus makes them bug off.

Carne Asada with Confetti Salsa. The combination of fruity salsa & marinated meat makes this the perfect Mexican meal

The more time the sirloin tips bathe in this recipe's punchy marinade of lime juice, Worcestershire sauce and garlic, the better. So while it calls for marinating the meat for about two hours, don't hesitate to toss them in as you head out to work in the morning. You'll be rewarded when you get home and crank up the grill.

To save time, you could substitute a mango or other fruity jarred salsa for the one made as part of this recipe. If you have time, this salsa is a chunky hodge-podge of bell pepper, tomatillos, avocado, mango, tomato and red onion, with a bit of heat from a chipotle chili in adobo.

1. In a large zip-close bag, combine the sirloin tips, lime juice, salt, Worcestershire sauce, olive oil, black pepper and garlic cloves. Shake to coat the meat. Refrigerate for two hours.

2. Meanwhile, in a large bowl combine the bell pepper, tomatillos, avocado, mango, tomato, red onion, chipotle, adobo sauce, garlic, lime juice and cilantro. Stir well, then season with salt and black pepper. Refrigerate for 30 minutes before serving.

3. When ready to cook the steak, heat a grill to high.

4. Drain the meat, discarding the marinade. Use paper towels to pat the meat dry. Sear on the grill, about four minutes per side for medium-rare. Serve with the confetti salsa.

Ingredients

For the meat:
- 2 pounds sirloin tips
- 2 tbsp lime juice
- 1 tsp salt
- 2 tbsp Worcestershire sauce
- 2 tbsp olive oil
- 1 tsp black pepper
- 2 cloves garlic, smashed

For the salsa:
- 1 yellow pepper, cored, diced
- 3 tomatillos, diced
- 1 avocado, pitted and diced
- 1 mango, pitted and diced
- 1 large tomato, diced
- 1/2 small red onion, diced
- 1 chipotle in adobo sauce, minced

- 1 garlic clove, minced
- 3 tablespoons lime juice
- 1/4 cup chopped cilantro
- Salt and ground black pepper

Mole Chicken Enchiladas. Made easy

1. In blender, combine onion, garlic, almond butter, water, broth, tomatoes, bread, hot sauce, cocoa powder, chili powder, cumin, cinnamon and lime juice. Blend until smooth, then transfer to sauté pan. Bring to simmer over medium heat, stirring often, and cook for eight minutes. Taste, then season with salt and pepper.

2. Add chicken to pan and stir well. Return to simmer and cook just until heated through.

3. Wrap tortillas in damp paper towel, then microwave for 20 seconds, or until tender.

4. One at a time, spoon some of the mole chicken filling down the centre of each tortilla. Roll, then arrange on a serving platter. Repeat with remaining tortillas and filling. Spoon a bit more of the filling over the rolled enchiladas, then crumble the queso blanco over them.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ingredients

- 1 small onion, quartered
- 1 clove garlic
- 1 cup almond butter
- 1 cup water
- 1/2 cup chicken broth
- 1/2 cup diced tomatoes
- 1 slice soft sandwich bread

Celebration

Cinco de Mayo celebrates the victory of the Mexican Army over the French at the Battle of Puebla in 1862. Celebrations include not only wonderful Mexican foods, but also parades, mariachi music and folk dancing.

Traditional Mexican cuisine varies vastly from region to region in Mexico.

The earliest Mexican agricultural staples were beans, squash and chili peppers, with corn arriving some 2,000 years later. Staples expanded to include avocados, coconuts, tomatoes, sweet potatoes, peanuts, chia seeds, and more varieties of beans.

The herb of choice was usually epazote, similar to cilantro in its strong, pungent flavours. Meanwhile, meats included turkeys, ducks, quail, peccaries, pigeons, and a wide variety of fish and shellfish.

Early traditional dishes included atole (porridge), tortilla, tamales (filled pastries, both savory and sweet) and soups. The cuisine has expanded to include a wide variety of dishes way beyond burritos, tacos and salsa.

NHL. Overtime win puts New Jersey into driver's seat vs. Philly

Alexei Ponikarovsky scored on his own rebound with 2:39 left in overtime and the New Jersey Devils defeated the Philadelphia Flyers, 4-3, Thursday night to take a 2-1 lead in this Eastern Conference semifinal series.

Patrik Elias, Ilya Kovalchuk and Zach Parise also scored for the Devils, who killed off two penalties in overtime before Ponikarovsky came through with his first goal of the post-season on a backhander that sneaked past Ilya Bryzgalov on his left side.

"I didn't have time to celebrate because everyone jumped on me right away, but I had a great time in the pile," said Ponikarovsky, whose goal was set up by a wonderful pass from Kovalchuk that forged a 2-on-1 break into the zone.

Martin Brodeur made 25 saves for New Jersey, which will look to take a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series Sunday in East Rutherford.

Kovalchuk, who missed Game 2 with a lower-body injury, also had two assists in his return with none more important than his pass that caught the Flyers on a bad change.

"You feel pressure," Kovalchuk said after watching the Devils win Game 2 while he nursed a back injury. "The guys played so well, and you want to get back in the lineup because you just want to play."

Kovalchuk more than showed he was ready, though.

Danny Briere, Matt Carle and Brayden Schenn tallied for the Flyers. Bryzgalov had 27 saves.

"We're down 2-1, the pressure is on us," Flyers forward Claude Giroux said. "There is no guy on this team that is going to quit. It's going to be a wake-up call.

"We have a good series now."

Schenn nearly won the game eight minutes into overtime with a deflection in front, and then the Devils' penalty kill did an outstanding job after a controversial boarding call against Dainius Zubrus with 11:37 left in the overtime and a delay-of-game penalty against Bryce Salvador.

New Jersey had problems with its short-handed lines in Round 1 versus Florida, but the unit that was ranked No. 1 in the regular season appears to have regained its form.

"I think the power play won us a lot of games this year and tonight wasn't the case," Giroux said. "We have to do a better job."

The power play is actually killing the Flyers, who are 2-for-16 in this series after going 12-for-23 against the Penguins.

LeBron James scored 32 points, including eight straight to start the fourth quarter and break open the game, and the Miami Heat took a 3-0 lead, sending the New York Knicks to an NBA post-season-record 13th straight loss, with a 87-70 win on Thursday night.

James had 17 points in the final period for the Heat, who held the short-handed Knicks to eight field goals in the second half and will go for the sweep Sunday afternoon.

Dwyane Wade added 20 points for the Heat and Mario Chalmers had 19, hitting consecutive three-pointers in the fourth quarter when the Heat finally brought some beauty to what had been an ugly game.

Carmelo Anthony scored 22 points on seven of 23 shots for the Knicks, who are playing without Amare Stoudemire, Jeremy Lin and Iman Shumpert and needed a super effort from Anthony he didn't come close to providing.

The Knicks broke the record set by Memphis from 2004-06. They haven't won a playoff game since April 29, 2001, Game 3 of a best-of-five series against Toronto.

'It felt like it was never going to end'

NHL. New York and Washington rest up after gruelling triple overtime Game 3

The New York Rangers played what amounted to two games over two days just to get one win against the Washington Capitals.

Each team scored a goal in the second period, then skated the ice for the next 83 minutes before Marian Gaborik gave the Rangers a 2-1 victory at 14:41 of the third overtime to end the 20th longest game in the history of the Stanley Cup playoffs, a matchup that began Wednesday night and spilled into Thursday.

If it was the decisive game of the series, Rangers coach John Tortorella might have been more enthusiastic. Instead, he looked at the win for what it was: A gritty performance that gave New York a 2-1 lead in a best-of-seven that doesn't seem likely to end anytime soon.

"It's one game," Tortorella said in a conference call Thursday. "You take the good things out of it and try to keep momentum on your side."

It's impossible to say whether the good vibes the Rangers gained with the win will carry into Saturday, when the teams meet in Washington for Game 4.

"We have confidence in our team," Washington's Troy Brouwer said. "I mean, if we continue playing like we did, creating offence, blocking shots, you know, playing good, patient hockey, we'll be successful."

Capitals coach Dale Hunter played in a four-overtime game and now has stood behind the bench in a three-overtime thriller. He lost both games, but neither of them ended a series.

"Well, you go into triple overtime it's a special game," Hunter said in the wee hours Thursday. "But it's just one game and you've got to bounce back."

Gaborik won it in the 115th minute. The game started at 7:40 p.m. ET on Wednesday and ended at 12:14 a.m. Thursday.

Rangers goaltender Henrik Lundqvist was too exhausted to let out a yell afterward. More than excitement, he experienced relief.

"It's a feeling where, usually, I scream because I'm so excited. I was just too tired," Lundqvist said after his 45-save performance. "I kept saying, 'Oh my God, it's over.' I mean, oh my God. It felt like it was never going to end." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"It's nice that both teams get two days to recoup. This way, they both get to come back and get two days' rest and you see a better hockey game."

Riders make Heenan No. 1 as expected

Every time Saskatchewan Roughriders general manager Brendan Taman looked for the top player in the 2012 CFL draft, he always returned to the one in his own backyard.

So when Taman decided to keep the first pick overall, he did the expected Thursday and used it on Saskatchewan Huskies offensive lineman Ben Heenan.

"The only way we weren't going to go that way was if we traded the pick, and actually at two points we were getting pretty close to doing something."

The six-foot-four, 310-pound Heenan spent the season as the top-ranked draft prospect.

The B.C. Lions acquired the No. 2 selection from Edmonton and used it on Jabar Westerman, a defensive lineman from Eastern Michigan.

Edmonton took Austin Pasztor with the Lions' fourth-overall pick, a six-foot-seven, 306-pound offensive lineman at Virginia. But they'll have to wait for the native of Langton, Ont., who signed a free-agent deal with the NFL's Minnesota Vikings.

The Calgary Stampeders, who also looked to move up to No. 2 or No. 3 for a shot at Westerman, used the fifth-overall pick to take Montreal's Ameet Pall, a six-foot, 245-pound pass-rushing specialist who played at Wofford.

Edmonton followed at No. 6, taking Laurier receiver Shamawd Chambers, who will attend the Philadelphia Eagles' mini-camp. However, Chambers is expected to be back in Canada sometime this year and the speedy six-foot-three, 219-pound native of Markham, Ont., has definite big-play ability.

B.C. completed the opening round by shoring up its offensive line, adding Kirby Fabien, a six-foot-six, 295-pound Calgary native who played for the Calgary Dinos.
